

Chicago Tribune

Final

25¢ City and suburbs/35¢ elsewhere

Tuesday, July 23, 1985

139th Year — No. 204 © Chicago Tribune 4 Sections C

Good morning

Cubs win; Sox romp

Keith Moreland drives in the winning run in the Cubs' 5-3 victory over the Padres and the White Sox batter the Tigers 9-4. In Sports.

Tracy Jackson tries again

Ex-Bull Tracy Jackson, a former Notre Dame star, is trying to regain an NBA job at the Summer Rookie League at UIC. In Sports.

Inside

$1 million tax bill paid

The Gouletas family pays $1 million in back real estate taxes and interest it owed on Lake Point Tower, INC. reports. Page 16.

3 Jewish terrorists get life

An Israeli court sentences 3 Jewish terrorists to life imprisonment but gives 12 others as little as 4 months in jail. Page 6.

Edgar

Scofflaws may be paid

Secretary of State Jim Edgar is studying a judge's decision to determine whether the state must refund almost $225,000 to nearly 15,000 former parking ticket scofflaws. Sec. 2, pg. 1.

Mayor attacks Byrne 'deal'

Mayor Harold Washington says Jane Byrne's campaign for mayor is part of a deal she cut with Aid. Edward Vrdolyak. Sec. 2, pg. 1.

OPEC unity

South Africa death toll rises

By Nathaniel Sheppard Jr.
Chicago Tribune

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa—Three people were reported killed, 50 arrested and an estimated 200 detained without charge Monday as police and military forces continued a sweep of black townships under the state of emergency that began Sunday.

The state of emergency was broadly condemned here and abroad. In Brussels, the European Community called on Pretoria to end the clampdown and to release all political detainees. In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes, while refraining from criticizing the clampdown directly, said apartheid was "largely responsible for the current violence."

● Resistance in South Africa will go on, a dissident vows. Page 2.

Details of police and defense force activities in the 36 local authorities affected by the order were sketchy and could not be confirmed independently because of government restrictions on journalists' access to black townships.

Police said two persons were killed in Tsakane, about 50 miles east of here, after authorities interceded when a group of about 4,000 blacks allegedly attacked the home of a policeman. The third death occurred, ac-ording to the police, when authorities used birdshot and rubber bullets to repel a group of about 200 people who had allegedly stoned armored police vehicles occupying Zanaville, in the western Cape near Oudtshoorn.

However, official reports were at variance with those from township residents and others.

Residents of Soweto, a black township of about 1.4 million residents outside Johannesburg, said police and defense forces stormed numerous homes Sunday and Monday, arresting scores of people and shooting many others.

In Johannesburg, a resident reported hearing two uniformed policemen telling an acquaintance in Afrikaans that many more "kaffirs" had been killed than had been officially acknowledged. "Kaffir" is a pejorative term applied to nonwhites. Po-

Continued on page 2

Tribune Photo by Don Casper

Classmates of Kristina Wesselman comfort one another Monday as the 15-year-old Glenbard South

High School student's body is removed from a field a few blocks from her home.

A killer awaited girl along path

By Art Barnum
and George Papajohn

A well-worn shortcut through a field connecting the Valleyview subdivision in unincorporated Du Page County with a supermarket led investigators to the body of a popular Glenbard South High School student Monday, hours after she was last seen buying candy in the store.

Investigators said they had no suspects and knew of no motive in the slaying of Kristina Wesselman, 15, president of the freshman class at the Glen Ellyn high school last year and also popular in the middle-class subdivision known as the "Valley."

Sheriff's police said the girl's body, showing "signs of violence," was found alongside a tree among the weeds in a field behind the Jewel Food Store at Ill. Hwy. 53 and Butterfield Road in Milton Township.

The girl was found 10 to 15 feet off the path and may have been ambushed while returning from the store to the Valley and the neat ranch-style house at 3S229 Cypress Dr. she shared with her mother, two brothers and a sister.

Kristina Wesselman

"Apparently she was on her way home when something happened," Undersheriff Robert Soucek said. Kristina, known as "Kristy" to her friends and family, was last seen in the store about 4 p.m. Sunday and was reported missing at 1:50 a.m.

Continued on page 2

Slaying

Continued from page 1

Monday by her mother, Sandy Wesselman.

Sheriff Richard Doria said a patrol unit was dispatched immediately to search the vicinity and question the mother. Kevin Buchholtz, a sheriff's detective, had taken up the search at 8 a.m. and was on the path he thought Kristina might have taken home when he found the body shortly after 11 a.m., Doria said.

Her clothes were in disarray, investigators said. An autopsy was being conducted.

Valley residents, who have nonchalantly walked or cycled along the narrow 150-yard path since the subdivision was built 20 years ago, said they were shocked by the crime.

"All of our kids over the years have walked to Jewel. You'll see a very well-worn path," said Betty Lou Reese, who is active politically in the subdivision and whose children, ages 19 and 22, used to cross the field regularly.

"It was just an everyday thing—all these kids walking to the Jewel or the McDonald's."

Many neighborhood youths Monday stood crying in the parking lot of the small shopping center that includes the Jewel, as investigators combed the field for clues.

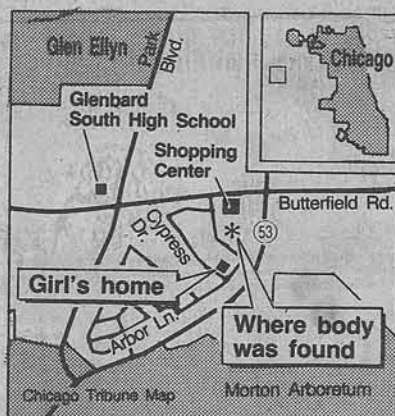

"Everybody liked her," said Dean Doormann, one of her classmates. "She had no enemies."

Keith Nelson, another classmate who lives in subdivision, said, "All of us have cut through this field so many times, hundreds of kids every day. I never thought anything like this would ever happen."

Kristina, described as an athletic, above-average student, had been elected vice president of her sophomore class. She was a member of the school's volleyball and softball teams.

"She's the kind of young lady that it's easy to say nice things about," said Glenbard South Principal Peter Abruzzo. "She was quite a nice young lady, a good, active student."

Kristina was last seen about 4 p.m. Sunday buying candy for her mother and herself in the store.

A store checker, Vernon Royster, 21, who said he has known the girl for years, recalled seeing her leave. "I said, 'Take care.' She said, 'Okay.' She was smiling. Nothing looked out of the ordinary," he said.

Royster, a Northern Illinois University student, said that he used to baby-sit the girl and that she went to the store frequently. "As far as I was concerned, she was going back home," he said. "It's kind of an eerie feeling."

Royster said he used the path behind the store to get home about 5:30 p.m. Sunday and did not see anything unusual. He said the girl's mother had called him about 2:30 a.m. Monday at his home to ask if he knew Kristina's whereabouts.

Several other residents reported taking the popular shortcut through 3- to 4-foot weeds and a clutch of trees connecting the Valley, a tightly knit community, with the shopping center Sunday evening and Monday morning. All said they saw nothing unusual.

Robert Hesch, 19, of Glen Ellyn, who works at a gasoline station in the shopping center about 200 feet from where the girl's body was found, said he had been working Sunday night.

"It was a real quiet, normal night," Hesch said.

In addition to her mother and father, who lives in Kentucky, Kristina is survived by two brothers, William, 17, and Gregory, 16, and a sister, Susan, 13.